I am taking care of a 42 year old special needs life skills adult (who is snubbed by the local programs but not participants). The center for her day care is still closed. There are people that actually live there, and everyone else lives outside. COVID shut it down because of it. The workers contact with everyone could have made someone sick (they are licensed professionals). The arrangement with my now 8 yr old son, is wrong and flimsy, but I don't know of any good attorney's that I can afford so I can only see him twice a month for 2hrs on 1 day. He was breast fed... It is a bad situation and I don't want him hurt anymore than he already has been. I think he wants to see me more. I don't think my sister-in-law is considered safe to be alone with small children. She fights with boys. Is severely prejudice against them. Thanks for letting me vent and thanks for not sharing this information. I did not ask for this survey. It was sent to me. No I am not pregnant and am unlikely to have any more children. • N/A • I have good experience • Wasn't really a factor , just didn't get involved in school activities due to parental responsibilities

- Never have.
- No
- Never have and never will unless emergency but I have also never seen anyone at the campus with their children so I would never think to bring mine. I wouldn't know where to put them or what to do with them, they'd just be a distraction.
- I have never brought my children to class, nor would I unless it was an absolute emergency and all of my other options exhausted. If there were not an essential task in class, then I would probably miss to stay home. From what I have seen, many of the professors have been extremely accommodating to child care issues.

- N/a
- Time management between work school kids
- I see others who are unaware of their rights undwr Title IX pregnancy
- Studying
- Very hard to do both very stressful
- Staying motivated to attend classes
- N/A
- The hardest part is making sure my child does her school work and I have time to study as well and complete household chores.
- Having a baby in the second to last month of the semester of college classes. All during the peak of a pandemic.
- The biggest challenge was time management. Having to fit in work, time with child, house duties, home work and studying... and somewhere in there, sleep.
- Balancing my school, my child's school schedule, and when I was working my work schedule. No time for extra curricular activities or much time for family.
- Managing your time while studying, taking tests and going on campus takes up time from being a parent. Adding everything up is very stressful.
- My biggest challenge is figuring out how I'm going to be able to balance work, school, and parenting.
- Sometimes getting someone to sit while you go to school or finding time to study & also cater to their needs.
- I'm trying to get it done all online so i can still be there with my child and I end up having to do my tests in the middle of the night while she's sleeping and pray she stays asleep until i finish

- Sometimes when I find a babysitter they over charge. It would be $20 for each day
- Being able to stay focused and study without my kids disrupting. No childcare or daycare on campus that can watch my children while I study. No flexible hours for study rooms (late nights or weekends).
- Finances, it's hard taking out loans just to cover semester not including book cost.
- Well, after the pandemic started I decided to take a year off because of having to at home teach and knowing myself with ADHD I knew I personally would not be able to handle the full load of online courses and being a non-teacher teacher to my children. So, if there were offered a safe teaching, study, child care for those public school students of parents that would have maybe been an option I could have chose.

- Finding places that tutor,
- Child care
- Time management and studying or completing work while they are around. When the children are awake, they interrupt me a bit and I have a hard time focussing on my school work.
- My biggest challenge is time management. It feels like something is always coming up so when I get the chance to do school work I end up doing as much as possible which is draining but it feels better than falling behind on school work.
- Flexible scheduling
- Been able to balance study time, child activities, and work
- Time
- Time management and finances
- Sometimes it's hard to be a full mom and go to school at the same time
- Balancing school, work and being a parent. Sometimes not having child care to better your education.
- Child care during classes.
- I struggle knowing if I'm going to have time to be a student as well as parenting.
- Trying to start school again after being out since 2015 and trying to go to school while keeping in mind my husbands work schedule and money .
- I took classes in summer of 2020. I was enrolled in English 1302, and it was my last chance to take this class (I was in impact echs and did not take it seriously and I deeply regret that). I could not give 100% of my focus to school, because my son was an infant at the time and I failed the class. That was one of the most depressing things that happened to me, and one of the biggest challenges.
- Time managing & finding an affordable child care.
- I haven't been able to attend school after I had my 2 year old
- balance my school work and study time while also helping my child with her school work and dealing with a loud toddler running around .
- Finance for class
- Balancing time with school and child
- Caring for a newborn and knowing I didn't have child care to continue my education
- My biggest challenge would be, making sure that I'm still meeting all the needs of my children while bettering myself!
- Time Management
- N/a
- Not being to attend important events.
- Child care
- Due dates when children are sick or I when I have parenting obligations.
- I do not have children at the moment.
- N/A
- My biggest challenge would have been Family/Work/School worklife balance or otherwise you will not be successful at one or more of these. Financial challenges also rank pretty high to complete a degree as well.
- N/A
- Balancing all parts of life
- My case is different. My GpA is lower than it could be because I had to quit in the middle of a semester. Completely my fault, but now as a single parent I can't afford to pay for all of my classes. Also I can't qualify for a FASFA grant or loan because my GPA. Other options? I don't even know.
- I'm currently a full time online student so it's easier for me to be caring for my children in my own home, however there are times when I'm trying to concentrate on school work or I'm in the middle of a lesson and one of my kids needs attention and it's hard to juggle both things.
- It is difficult to both parent and be a student but with a lack of support for my school things can be even more challenging. During this pandemic the campus has been more willing to help and give information on services that I might need. Before it was different.
- Balancing work child care and school
- Time management.

- It's hard having family responsibilities and going to school and working all at the same time. Sometimes I feel like just quitting and focusing on my kids. Having no support is difficult as well, but sometimes my older kids do try to help, but anything is helpful at this point in time.
- Have not really had any major issues. If anything I just worry about getting out of class on time to make it to the events for my children. But, its not a big deal really
- Time management while balancing full-time work. Finding enough time to truly focus on school work can be challenging due to the amount of time it takes to unwind from or shut off other distractions. For example, I have a 3 hour block in the mornings for school work, it takes about 45 minutes to just catch up on work emails, check in on the children at home, and shift focus to academic assignments.
- No child care
- The biggest challenge is finding time to do my coursework while being a full time parent once I get home from work, helping my son with his school work as well.

- Balancing school work and children And financial burdens as well
- Working 2 full-time jobs and going to school. The amount of assignments that are being given is very stressful especially if you are new to the subject and the lecturers do not teach or you are left to teach yourself about the subject. how will you pass that subject?
- having a space to do my work without my children bothering anyone else. Having a space to do my work that I can focus on and it not be loud if I had to bring my children. Having children and trying to maintain a household, relationship, their school, my school and work and be able to be in a good mindset. To keep a positive headspace for me and not become so overwhelmed and give up.
- childcare, if sick will not be able to go to childcare
- Sometimes money can be an issue but I manage.
- We need on-campus childcare for those of us who cannot afford daycare but make slightly to much to qualify for public assistance. Those of us who fall through the cracks of society because we are neither poor enough for help nor rich enough to afford all basic needs.
